The problems of important public relations — between the state and the individual in modern Russia are thrown light upon. The pattern of legal state and civil society in western countries, as well as the problems of formation of these institutions in modern Russian history are analyzed. Much attention is given to the most significant aspects of relations between the state and the individual – political, economic, and social. The author's vision of the problem and ways to solve it are given.

Keywords: state, personality, human rights, civil society, legal state, social inequality, political regime
