The article is devoted to the problems and difficulties of social partnership in Russia under late industrial modernization. Modernization, as well as postmodernization of the Russian society is impossible without social, economic, political, legal, social stabilization. One of the means of such stabilization, which is a civilized form of public relations in social and labor issues, has been called social partnership. Social partnership is the path to an effective state based on social cohesion, increase of public support for the goals and actions of the authorities. The idea of social partnership is clear and important for various strata of society. It is caused by the necessity to connect the power to the people, to create a just constructive society, to unite the spiritual and material. The author also explores the social partnership mechanism that consolidates the state, businesses and people around the main goals.

Keywords: social partnership, modernization, post-industrialization, social and labor relations, social consolidation, socio-political structure, socio-political organizations.
