The study tested the problem of transformation of the manager profession in the era of globalization. The research highlights the historical aspects of the profession development and examines the competence of a manager at various management levels. We consider system thinking, multilingualism, multiculturalism, skills of knowledge management as the basis for professional aptitude and vocational fitness. Moreover, we indicate new specializations of the manager profession in the era of globalization.

Keywords: profession, manager, professional competence, social adaptation, transformation of the profession.
