
The Formation of the Orenburg Gas-Chemical Cluster as a Factor in Strengthening Energy Cooperation between Russia and the Central Asian States

© G.O. Khalova¹, V.A. Smirnova²

¹ Bauman Moscow State Technical University, Moscow, 105005, Russia

² School of Economics and management Tongji University, Shanghai, China

The article considers the problems of energy cooperation between Russia and the Central Asian States, as well as the formation of a gas-chemical cluster in the Orenburg region.

Keywords: energy cooperation, gas-chemical cluster, the Central Asian region, Orenburg region.

Khalova G.O. (b. 1955) graduated from Turkmen Polytechnic Institute on a speciality Economy and Organization of Construction in 1977. Dr. Sci. (Econ.), Professor of the Economic Theory Department of Bauman Moscow State Technical University, Professor of Gubkin Russian State University of Oil and Gas. Published 135 scientific and educational-methodical works. Prepared 8 candidates of Sciences. Scientific interests: macroeconomic policy in the sphere of regulation and use of natural resources; foreign economic activity of enterprises, the problems of development of the world economy. e-mail: khalovag@yandex.ru

Smirnova V.A. graduated from Gubkin Russian State University of Oil and Gas. Ph. D., doctoral student of the School of Economics and management Tongji University (Shanghai, China). Published 17 scientific, educational and educational-methodical works, totaling 21 P. S. Deals with the issues of: the problems of formation gas and petrochemical cluster, oil and gas TNCs worldwide. e-mail: smirver@mail.ru
